EDITORIAL NOTE

This volume "Catalogue of Coins No. 2," Frontier Archaeology, Vol. IV (2006) provides a description of Indo-Greek and Scytho-Parthian coins held in the Peshawar Museum numismatic collection. The work leading to the current volume has proven long and laborious for the compilers, editor, and printer alike. All of the contributors to the current volume have endeavoured their level best to bring this work in accordance with international standards followed by the numismatists worldwide. Scholarly works that provided invaluable information in the development of this volume include Percy Gardner's (1886) The Coins of the Greek and Scythic Kings of Bactria and India in the British Museum, R.B. Whitehead's (1914) Catalogue of Coins in the Punjab Museum and Osmund Bopearachchi's (1991) Monnaies Greco-Bactriennes Et Indo-Grecques, Catalogue Raisonne.

The Peshawar Museum numismatic collection has been divided into several catalogues to enhance reader convenience and to reduce the unwieldy cumbersomeness a single omnibus volume would necessarily entail. In "Catalogue of Coins No. 1 (Kushan Period)," Frontier Archaeology, Vol. II (2004), we set forth how the numismatic collection at the Peshawar Museum was initiated, which scholars have worked on these coins previously and how the idea for compiling a catalogue of the Museum's numismatic collection came about. Our Accession Numbers followed the Catalogue order adopted previously by the Peshawar Museum authorities.

The current volume provides a brief description of the history and coinage of Indo-Greek and Scytho-Parthian dynasties with their catalogue of coins. The present volume is divided into two Chapters. One deals with the Bactrian and Indo-Greek coins encompassed by the Peshawar Museum numismatic collection and their historical background in chronological order. The second chapter provides a description of the history and coinage of the Scytho-Parthians in chronological order.

The preparation of the Frontier Archaeology publications is now well advanced. The best available research sources have been consulted to ensure that this work is as thorough as possible. It is hoped that this volume, and those that follow will prove to be valuable sources of both information and pleasure to the interested readers worldwide. As this volume goes to press, work on "Life Story of Buddha in Peshawar Museum, Catalogue of Sculptures No. 1," Frontier Archaeology, Vol. V is in its final stages.

The editor feels honoured to present this volume of "Frontier Archaeology" to the readers on the occasion of Centenary Celebrations of the Peshawar Museum and would welcome the guidance and support of scholars for the continuation and improvement of our research work.

GRAECO-BACTRIAN AND INDO-GREEK COINS IN THE PESHAWAR MUSEUM

1.1 Alexander's Campaign

Greek contact with India began with the invasion of Alexander in 327 BC (Ali, 2003: 37). This proved to be "a sheet anchor" in the history of the subcontinent (Dani, 1983: 180). According to Herodotus, the first Greek to have come to this area was Scylax of Caryanda, who was sent by King Darius to explore the navigability of the Indus. He started his journey from the city of Kaspatturos, which is identified by Olaf Caroe (1976: 28-33) with modern Peshawar (Ali, 2003: 36), though this identification remains controversial.

Alexander the Great, son of Philip II of Macedonia, ascended the throne and declared his political manifesto in reply to a letter from Darius III, "Your ancestors invaded Macedonia and the rest of Greece and without provocation inflicted wrongs upon us. I was appointed leader of the Greeks, and crossed over into Asia to avenge these wrongs; for you were the first aggressors." The motivation of revenge has been interpreted by some historians as being a 'crusade' against the Persians (Dani, 1999: 68). Alexander then launched a campaign to conquer the Achaemenian Empire and dethroned Darius III, the last Achaemenian ruler, at Gaugamela in 331 BC (Ibid: 67). Alexander further proceeded towards Central Asia and India. The Achaemenid Satrapy of Bactria was conquered in 328 BC (Khan, 1998: 17) and then, under the cool shade of the Hindu Kush, he decided to march his army to Paropamisadae (Alexandria of Caucasus) and Gandhara (Peshawar Valley). At Nikaeaia, he divided his army into two parts. Many historical and archaeological indicators hint that Alexander entered Gandhara through Nawa Pass in the Bajaur Valley. He personally led one group to Aragona (Bajaur), Talash Valley, Bazira (modern Barikot) and Ora (modern Udigram) in the Swat Valley, where he defeated the Assakenians. Alexander found these people brave and courageous. The classic Greek historians also mentioned Massaga, a fortified town. The second division of Alexander's army, commanded by two of his generals, Hephaistion and Perdikeas, proceeded southwards to Pushkalavati (modern Charsadda), the first capital of Gandhara (Smith, 1967). Astes was the ruler of Pushkalavati and he was surrounded by foes such, as Sanjaya, whose opposition to Astes made the Greek invasion easier. After a long siege, Astes surrendered on the condition that Alexander should personally come and receive the city, which Alexander did after he came from the Swat Valley and travelled back from Hund to subjugate Pushkalavati (modern Charsadda). Astes was dethroned and Sanjaya became the ruler of Pushkalavati.

Alexander left his trail along the route from the hills of Bajaur, Dir and Swat to Charsadda and from there to Hund, where he crossed the Indus on his way to Punjab (Ali, 2005: 5), thereby laying the foundation of a Greek settlement on the site, one of the most amazing works the ancient world ever saw (Tarn, 1951: 129). Alexander successfully conquered the northern regions of the subcontinent down to the Beas River, where his soldiers, tired of endless wars, forced him to turn back (Dar, 1998: 180).

1.2 Alexander's Successors in the East

Upon Alexander's premature death at Babylon on June 13, 323 BC, a struggle arose among his confederates to fill the vacuum of power. The most successful was Seleucus Nicator in Asia, who established the Seleucid dynasty (Dani, 1999: 87). Though Seleucus was able to retain the territories of Syria, Mesopotamia and Persia, he lost control of the territories south of the Hindu Kush to Chandra Gupta Maurya (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 21), the first king of the Mauryan dynasty of Magadha. It appears that by the year of Alexander's death, Chandra Gupta was the king of entire northwestern area up to southern Afghanistan, and this naturally included the Peshawar Plain. The Mauryan Empire came to an end around 187 BC and was succeeded south of Hindu Kush by a group of rulers, popularly known as Indo-Greeks, with their power nucleus in Bactria (Ali, 2003: 36-37).

The territories occupied by the Greeks and their nomadic successors correspond to the present day Central Asian Republics of Uzbekistan and Tajikistan, Afghanistan, Pakistan and Northwest India. In ancient times, these regions were known as Sogdiana, Bactria, Aria, Arachosia, Paropamisadae and Gandhara. Geographically and politically, these regions can be divided into two distinct zones. The natural barrier of the Hindu Kush mountain range, described as Caucasus by classical authors, provides this division. The area north of the Hindu Kush was composed mainly of Bactria and Sogdiana. The area south of the range encompassed Arachosia, Paropamisadae and Gandhara (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 21).

These Greeks are called by different names such as; Indus-Greeks, Indo-Greeks, Indo-Bactrian-Greeks and Graeco-Bactrians. Their coins are well known in Pakistan and neighbouring countries as belonging to the first in a series of alien rulers in the area (Rahim, 1998: 49). Recent archaeological research has identified 248 Indo-Greek sites in the Peshawar Valley (Ali, 2003: 105,106), 10 in the Bajaur Agency and three in the Mohmand Agency (Ali and Rahman, 2005: 68).

Due to limited archaeological and historical data, numismatic evidence provides the main source for reconstructing the history of the Greeks and their successors in Bactria and India. Their coins preserve a record of more than forty kings and queens, while the written record only mentions seven of them (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 22). The Indo-Greek kings introduced a coinage system that was shaped by Greek influences and which displays Greek deities, legends and clothing. Greek coins provide a sort of grammar of Greek art and these pieces may be considered one of the most important and interesting of all numismatic series (Poole, 1894: 3).

Indo-Greek coins provide a considerable array of information that is conveyed in different ways. The representational styles suggest broad chronological frameworks. The overstrikes of one king on the coins of another reveal the successions of reigns, minting techniques, metrology and iconography. Finally, monograms associated with find spots greatly helps to evaluate the geographical localization of different kingdoms (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 22-23).

1.3 Graeco-Bactrian and Indo-Greek Coins in the Peshawar Museum

The Peshawar Museum coin collection currently contains a total of 178 coins (104 silver, 73 copper and 1 Billon) of thirty-two Greek and Indo-Greek kings and two queens. These Indo-Greek coins in the Peshawar Museum weigh between 1.40 to 24.14 grams and their size ranges between 12.25 x 13.58 to 34.16 mm. As far as shape is concerned, 124 are round and 54 are square. They include coins from the reigns of Alexander the Great, Sophytes, Antiochus (Seleucid), Euthydemus I (230-200 BC), Demetrius I (200-190 BC), Euthydemus II (190-185 BC), Agathocles (190-180 BC), Pantaleon (190-185 BC), Antimachus I Theos (185-170 BC), Apollodotus I (180-160 BC), Demetrius II (175-170 BC), Antimachus II Nickphorous (160-155 BC), Eucratides I (170-145 BC), Plato (145-140 BC), Heliocles I (145-130 BC), Menander I Soter (155-130 BC), Zoilus I (130-120 BC), Agathoclea & Strato I (130-125 BC), Strato I (125-110 BC), Lysias (120-110 BC), Antialcidas (115-95 BC), Heliocles II (110-100 BC), Polyxenos (100 BC), Philoxenus (100-95 BC), Diomedes (95-90 BC), Amyntas (95-90 BC), Epander (95-90 BC), Nicias (90-85 BC), Archebius (90-80 BC), Hermaeus & Calliope (90-70 BC), Hermaeus (90-70 BC), Strato I & Strato II, Apollodotus II (80-65 BC), Hippostratus (65-55 BC) and Strato II (25 BC- 10 AD).

Due to their important role in the reconstruction of history, this collection in the Peshawar Museum has received the attention of scholars from all over the world. Though the collection is referred to by many in a general sense, few coins have been published in detail. Mr. Muhammad Amin Jan, an official of the Peshawar Museum, published a collection of eight Greek and Indo-Greek coins in a paper, "Some Rare Coins in the Peshawar Museum" in the August 1954 issue of The Museum Journal. These coins included two silver coins from the reign of Alexander and a coin each from the reign of Pantaleon, Heliocles, Archebius, Menander, Epander and Amyntas (Jan, 1954: 47-50). The manuscript on the Pre-Kushan Coins in Pakistan by Dr. Osmund Bopearachchi and Aman-Ur-Rahman contains a supplement on the "Rare and Unreported Coins in the Peshawar Museum." This manuscript provides a description of seven coins of the Indo-Greek kings and a single coin of Maues, a Scythian king. The Indo-Greek coins included one each from the reign of Menander, Diomedes, Epander, Hermaeus, Apollodotus II and two from the reign of Nicias (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 220). Despite the fact that the collection is relatively small, it is varied, rich, informative and rare, with few suspected forgeries.

1.4 Graeco-Bactrian & Indo-Greek Coinage in the Peshawar Museum

The history of the Indo-Greek rulers begins with Diodotus I, who succeeded in a revolt against Antiochus II of the Syro-Greek dynasty (Ali et al, 2004:7), also called the Seleucid dynasty, about 256 BC in Bactria (Wilson, 1841: 216). Demetrius I or II is believed to be the first Indo-Greek king to establish himself in the area that became Pakistan. Demetrius was followed by a series of rulers who held sway over these regions until the first century BC (Rahim, 1998: 49). They minted coins in silver, copper, nickel and gold, although very few gold coins have been reported and gold coinage from any of the Indo-Greek kings after Eucratides is unknown (Whitehead, 1914: 5). All coins were minted in accordance with Attic weight standards. South Asian elements, including Indian weights, square shapes, and Kharoshthi script were introduced by Demetrius (Rahim, 1998: 49) on his copper coins (Whitehead, 1914: 5). There are two exceptions to the square issues of Pantaleon and Agathocles on which Brahmic script is inscribed. All Indo-Greek coins bear monograms or symbolic conjuncts of Greek letters (Rahim, 1998: 49). A brief historical background and coinage of the Greek and Indo-Greek rulers, represented by examples of their coins in the Peshawar Museum, is given in chronological order below.

1.4.1 Alexander

Alexander the Great can be credited with producing the first proper foreign coinage system in the subcontinent. The Peshawar Museum collection has two silver round coins of different types attributed to Alexander (p:15) but probably minted by later Indo-Greek rulers in Gandhara. The first has a diademed head of Zeus on the obverse and an eagle on the reverse. The second has a head of Herakles on the obverse and a seated Zeus on the reverse. Both have the same Greek legend on the reverse and both are in good condition. The weights of the coins are 15.94 and 16.68 grams, while the diameters are 24.72 and 28.53 mm. These coins were first published by Mr. M. Amin Jan, an official of the Peshawar Museum, in the Museum Journal of Pakistan (Jan, 1954).

1.4.2 Sophytes

Quite a few historians of Alexander's rule mention that Sopeithes, or Sophytes, was ruler of a district on the banks of the Acesines at the time of Alexander's invasions. Sophytes copied Seleucus Nicator's coins, and that probably helped him during his campaigns against Chandra Gupta Maurya (Gardner, 1971: XIX-XX). Alexander Cunningham first published coins of Sophytes in 1866. Percy Gardner considered them an interesting group of coins, whose date and place could be fixed. The Peshawar Museum collection (p:15) has a solitary silver round coin of Sophytes that measures 17.14 mm in diameter and weighs 4.26 grams in weight. The coin has a helmeted head of king to the right on obverse and a cock, caduceus and the Greek legend on the reverse.

1.4.3 Antiochus II (Seleucid)

Antiochus was the son of Seleucus, who made him viceroy and put him in charge of the upper Satrapies (Bernard, 1999: 90). Antiochus made an eastern expedition in about 208 BC. During this expedition, Antiochus defeated Euthydemus I, a usurper, in Bactria. The defeated Euthydemus I appealed to Antiochus II for mercy, saying that he was not one of those who had revolted against him. Finally, Antiochus II agreed to acknowledge Euthydemus I's independence (Gardner, 1971: XXI). Two silver round coins of different types in the Peshawar Museum collection derive from the reign of Antiochus II (p:16). The first has the diademed head of the king on the obverse and the head of a horse on the reverse. The second has the diademed head of the king on the obverse and an eagle on the reverse. These coins are in good condition, they weigh 13.64 and 15.80 grams, and measure 27.88 and 28.01 mm in diameter respectively.

1.4.4 Euthydemus I (230-200 BC)

Diodotus II, son of Diodotus I, was overthrown by Euthydemus I. He may have been the governor of Aria and Margiana under Diodotus II (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 27). Euthydemus I expanded the Bactrian kingdom and annexed areas up to the Kabul Valley (Ali, 2003: 37). Euthydemus I fomented a major revolt in Bactria and the surrounding region (Cunningham, 1868: 133), compelling Antiochus II to recognize the independence of Bactria in about 208 BC (Khan, 1998: 213). It was during the reign of Euthydemus I, or perhaps under the leadership of his son Demetrius, that the Indian conquest was made (Banerji, 1920: 131). Three coins of silver and one of copper in the Peshawar Museum collection derive from the reign of this powerful King (pp:16-17). The silver coins have the diademed head of the king on the obverse and a bearded, naked Herakles on the reverse. The copper coin has a bearded Herakles on the obverse and a horse on the reverse. Both types have the Greek legend on the reverse. These coins are in good condition, their weights range from 9.66 to 15.84 grams and their diameters range between 26.01 to 27.79 mm. The copper coin has a weight of 5.68 grams and a diameter of 20.96 mm.

1.4.5 Demetrius I (200-190 BC)

Demetrius was the son of Euthydemus I (Cunningham, 1868: 133), the first Bactrian king of India (Ali, 2003: 37) and the fourth King of Bactria, (Spear, 1999: 144). While a youth of perhaps seventeen, he acted as intermediary between his father, Euthydemus I, and Antiochus III (Rapson, 1922: 444-45). Demetrius I initiated an expansion of the Bactrian kingdom south of the Hindu Kush (Bernard, 1999: 101) when the death of King Asoka provided him the opportunity. Hence, he became the third foreign invader, after Darius and Alexander, to have conquered Northwestern

India (Tarn, 1951: 129); that is, the region of Gandhara and India where Kharoshti was used (Whitehead, 1914: 5). Three kings bearing the name Demetrius reigned in different periods. Demetrius I was followed by a large number of rulers who held control over these regions until first century BC (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 27). Two silver coins of the same type, though of different sizes, in the Peshawar Museum collection represent the reign of Demetrius I (p:18). This coin has a diademed bust of the king to the right wearing an elephant scalp on the obverse and a naked young Herakles and the Greek legend on the reverse. These coins are in excellent condition. The smaller coin has a weight of 3.54 grams and a diameter of 18.37 mm, while the larger has a weight of 16.18 grams and a diameter of 32.66 mm.

1.4.6 Euthydemus II (190-185 BC)

Euthydemus II was the son of Demetrius I and he ruled Bactria and Sogdiana in the absence of his father when his father was busy on campaigns (Tarn, 1951: 134). The Peshawar Museum collection has two coins that derive from the reign of Euthydemus II. These coins are minted in silver and copper, and are round in shape (pp:18-19). The silver coin has the diademed bust of a young king on the obverse and a naked Herakles on the reverse. The copper coin has the head of Apollo on the obverse and a tripod on the reverse. Both coins have a Greek legend on the reverse and both are in an excellent state of preservation. The copper coin has a small hole on the left side, probably indicating its use as an element of jewellery in ancient times. The silver coin has a weight of 16.34 grams and a diameter of 33.26 mm. The copper coin has a weight of 10.70 grams and a diameter of 28.19 mm.

1.4.7 Agathocles (190-180 BC) and Pantaleon (190-185 BC)

Agathocles and Pantaleon were, along with Euthydemus II, contemporaries or close successors (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 28). Euthydemus I introduced a new state form, in which a younger son might rule a definite part of the realm, not as a joint-king or satrap, but as a sub-king with the right of issuing coins. This is despite the fact that the Seleucids had never employed a system of sub-kings. Thus, when the heir-apparent governed the east, he was in theory a joint-king with his father of the whole kingdom (Tarn, 1951: 90). While Euthydemus II ruled Bactria in the western regions, Pantaleon and Agathocles ruled Gandhara and Western Punjab (Khan, 1998: 19). The portrait of Pantaleon shows an older man, suggesting that he must have been either the father or elder brother of Agathocles (Cunningham, 1868: 121). Nevertheless, the reign of Agathocles may have been longer than that of Pantaleon. The kingdom of Pantaleon likely extended to the North of Kabul to Arachosia and Western Paropamisadae (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 28, 120). Two round silver coins of Agathocles's reign are present in the Peshawar Museum collection (p:19). The first has a diademed head of Euthydemus I on the obverse and a bearded, naked Herakles on the reverse. The second has a diademed bust of the king on the obverse and Zeus on the reverse. Both have the Greek legend on the reverse. The weights of the silver coins are 15.36 and 15.82 grams and their diameters are 31.15 and 31.26 mm. There are two coins of Pantaleon in the Peshawar Museum collection (p:20). The square copper coin has a dancing girl on the obverse and a lioness or leopard on the reverse. The billon round coin (Jan, 1954: 48) has a diademed bust of Dionysus on the obverse and a lioness or leopard on the reverse. The copper coin has a weight of 13.88 grams and a size of 22.23 x 19.20 mm. The billon coin has a weight of 7.44 grams and a diameter 24.42 mm. All these coins are in a good state of preservation.

1.4.8 Antimachos I Theos (185-170 BC)

Antimachos I Theos was a sub-king under his father Euthydemus I and subsequently under his brother Demetrius I. Only one silver round coin derives from the reign of Antimachos I Theos in the Peshawar Museum collection (p:20). The coin has a diademed bust of the king on the obverse and Poseidon on the reverse. The coin has a weight of 15.54 grams and a diameter of 32.75 mm.

1.4.9 Apollodotus I (180-160 BC)

Apollodotus I was the immediate successor of Agathocles, Pantaleon and Antimachos I south of the Hindu Kush in the Indian territories (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 29). He was probably a brother or kinsman of Demetrius I and served him alongside Menander. Apollodotus is named first in classic texts suggesting that he was more important and connected with the royal house, while Menander was not, though the Greek sources mentioned the conquest of North India by all three; i.e., Demetrius, Apollodotus and Menander (Tarn, 1951: 141). Five silver and a single copper coin in the Peshawar Museum collection derive from the reign of Apollodotus I (pp:21-22). There are two main types of coins. Coins of the first type are both round and square in shape and feature an elephant on the obverse and humped bull on the reverse. Coins of the second type, are minted in copper, are square in shape, and have Apollo on the obverse and a tripod on the reverse. The coins are in good condition and range in weight from 1.44 to 8.50 grams. The single round coin measure is 15.79 mm in diameter, while the five square coins range from 14.51 x 15.75 to 22.66 x 22.35 mm in size.

1.4.10 Demetrius II (175-170 BC)

Demetrius II was the second son of Demetrius I. He came to India with his father during the Indian invasion. Demetrius II ruled and coined in Alexandria but he coined for his father, not for himself, as Antiochus I had done (Tarn, 1951: 134, 139). Only one silver round coin in the Peshawar Museum derives from the reign of Demetrius II. This coin has the bust of the king on the obverse and Pallas on the reverse (p:23). The coin is in excellent condition and is very beautiful, with a weight of 16.00 grams and a diameter of 32.39 mm.

1.4.11 Antimachus II Nicephorus (160-155 BC)

Apollodotus I was succeeded by the second Antimachus, who claimed the title as Nicephorus (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 29). He was an early contemporary of Menander and must have ruled Gandhara (Tarn, 1951: 229). Five silver coins and one copper coin in the Peshawar Museum represent the reign of Antimachus II Nicephorus (pp:23-25). The silver coins are round in shape, have a winged Nike on the obverse and a diademed king on horseback on the reverse. The copper coins are square in shape, have an aegis with a Gorgon's head on the obverse, and a wreath and palm on the reverse. The silver coins range between 2.26 to 2.42 grams in weight and measure 16.25 to 16.92 mm in diameter. The copper coin has a weight of 7.40 grams and measures 22.57 x 21.73 mm in size.

1.4.12 Eucratides I (170-145 BC)

Eucratides I was a great and powerful ruler (Dani, 1991: 5). He was the son of Heliocles and Laodice, the first cousin of Antiochus IV. Like his father, Eucratides I was a governor of the upper satraps under Antiochus IV (Tarn, 1951: 197). After Euthydemus' death, his dominions were broken up by the rivalry between Demetrius and Eucratides (Gardner, 1971: XXIII). Eucratides was a usurper, for he was not the son of any of his Bactrian predecessors (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 30). After a fierce power struggle, Eucratides defeated Demetrius II (Barnard, 1999: 101) became a powerful king in Bactria, and invaded parts of India (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 30). His brilliant career as a military leader led him to be compared with his contemporary, Mithradates the great of Parthia (Barnard, 1999: 101). Three copper coins, two square and one round, in the Peshawar Museum collection derive from the reign of Eucratides I (pp:25-26). These coins have the diademed bust of the king on the obverse and a mounted Dioskuroi on the reverse. The silver coin has a weight of 15.42 grams and a diameter of 32.39 mm. The square copper coins range from 6.76 to 6.90 grams in weight and 21.94 x 23.07 to 23.41 x 22.77 mm in size. The round copper coin has a weight of 5.00 grams and a diameter of 21.18 mm.

1.4.13 Plato (145-130 BC) and Heliocles-I (145-130 BC)

The successor to Eucratides, or son who had shared the kingship with him, was his assassin. The king in question was one of his successors, Eucratides II, Plato or Heliocles I. There is no proof of any family relationship between Eucratides I and his successors (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 31). After the death of Eucratides, the Empire of the Bactrian Greeks crumbled into pieces and the Indian province separated (Whitehead, 1914: 5-6). Plato, an Indo-Greek ruler dated to 165 BC, and Timarchus of Babylon dated to 162 BC, imitated the coinage of Eucratides I. This may imply that the rule of Eucratides I lasted until about the reigns of these two kings. Plato may have been merely a short-lived rival or the leader of a satrap that revolted against Eucratides (Gardner, 1971:

XXVI). A single silver, unique and rare, round coin in the Peshawar Museum collection (p:26) derives from the reign of Plato. This coin has the diademed bust of the king on obverse and Helios in quadriga on reverse. It has a weight of 15.42 grams and a diameter of 34.16 mm.

Heliocles I, the successor of Eucratides I, was as powerful as his father and was named after his grandfather (Dani, 1991: 8-9). Heliocles I was last Greek king to rule in Bactria (Bernard, 1999: 103) and perhaps the last king whose coins are found north of the Hindu Kush (Rapson, 1922: 461). After Heliocles, the transfer of Greek power from Bactria to the territory south of Paropamisus was complete. By that time, many Greek princes had ruled Bactria and India (Banerji, 1920: 132). A silver round coin in the Peshawar Museum collection derives from the reign of Heliocles I (p: 27). This coin has the diademed bust of the king on obverse and Zeus standing on the reverse. The coin has a weight of 16.16 grams and a diameter of 31.69 mm.

1.4.14 Menander I (155-130 BC)

Menander I was one of the most important Greek kings to rule the territories south of the Hindu Kush. He is superior to all the Greek kings who ruled before and after him in Bactria and India (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 31) and he reigned in Punjab from about 160 to 140 BC (Spear, 1999: 144). Menander, who was born near modern Panjnad (Singh & Singh, 1932: 214), is better known in the Indian sources because he became a convert to Buddhism and his capital was Sakala, the modern city of Sialkot (Ali, 2003: 37). But the conversion of Menander to Buddhism, as recorded in Milindapanha, may or may not be an historical fact (Bernard, 1999: 117). He ruled the whole of the territory still remaining to the Greeks in that region, excluding the Paropamisadae. The death of Demetrius and Apollodotus and the return of Eucratides to Bactria left him master of the position in India. He legitimised his rule by marrying Demetrius' daughter, Agathocleia. After his death, Indo-Greek power in Punjab rapidly broke down into a series of petty Greek provinces (Tarn, 1951: 225).

A total of 40 coins of seven different types in the Peshawar Museum collection derive from the reign of Menander I (pp:27-40). These include 29 round silver and 11 square copper coins of this great king that fall into seven types. Coins of the first type are square shaped, minted in copper, have a helmeted bust of the king on the obverse and Pallas on the reverse. Coins of the second type are round shaped, minted in silver, have a bust of the king on the obverse and Pallas on the reverse. Coins of the third type are round shaped, minted in silver, have a diademed bust of the king thrusting a javelin on the obverse and Pallas on the reverse. Coins of the fourth type are round shaped, minted in silver, have a helmeted bust of the king on the obverse and Pallas on the reverse. Coins of the fifth type are square-shaped, minted in copper, have a head of the king on the obverse and a dolphin on the reverse (Jan, 1954: 49) (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 220). Coins of the sixth type are square-shaped, minted in copper have an elephant on the obverse and a club on the reverse. Coins of the seventh type are square-shaped, minted in copper, have a bust of the king on the obverse and a buckler with a Gorgon's head on the reverse. The weights of the eleven copper square coins range from 1.84 to 24.14 grams, while their sizes range from 12.25 x 13.58 to 26.32 x 25.90 mm. The weights of the 29 silver round coins range from 2.04 and 9.56 grams, while their diameters range from 15.95 to 25.76 mm.

1.4.15 Zoilus I (130-120 BC)

Zoilus I, along with Agathocleia and Strato I, was the immediate successor of Menander and the predecessor of Lysias and Antialcidas. They came to power at the same time in different territories; Zoilus I in Paropamisadae (Alexandria of the Caucasus), and Strato I and his regent, Agathocleia, in eastern Gandhara (modern Taxila) (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 35). A total of eight coins, with six round silver and two square copper, in the Peshawar Museum collection derive from the reign of Zoilus I (pp:40-43). These coins may be classified into two types. The first has a diademed bust of the king on the obverse and Pallas with an aegis and hurling thunderbolt on the reverse. The second has a diademed bust of the king on the obverse and Herakles on the reverse. The weights of the silver round coins range between 2.02 and 2.42 grams while their diameters range between 16.00 and 18.12 mm. The weights of the copper square coins weigh 8.34 and 8.52 grams, and measure 23.78 x 24.73 and 24.67 x 23.80 mm. A single copper round coin has a weight of 13.76 grams and a diameter of 29.89 mm.

1.4.16 Agathocleia and Strato I (130-125 BC)

Strato I was son of Menander and Agathocleia. Agathocleia represents the first woman to have actively participated in the affairs of the Hellenistic kingdoms, though rule by a queen had not been unknown in Macedonia (Tarn, 1951: 225, 317). Agathocleia served as regent during the childhood of her son Strato I (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 34). The reign of Strato I lasted for several decades, from the end of the second to the beginning of the first century BC (Bernard, 1999: 102). Two silver, round, joint issues of Strato I and Agathocleia of the same type and a square coin of Strato I are present in the Peshawar Museum coin collection (pp:43-44). The first has conjugate busts of Strato I and Agathocleia on the obverse and Pallas on the reverse. The second has a diademed bust of Herakles on the obverse and a winged Nike on the reverse. The two silver coins have weights of 8.28 and 9.76 grams and diameters of 27.39 and 29.28 mm. The copper coin of Strato I has a weight of 5.52 grams and a size of 18.45 x 19.90 mm.

1.4.17 Lysias (120-110 BC) and Antialcidas (115-95 BC)

Antialcidas was the son or a younger brother and successor of Lysias (Cunningham, 1868: 211) and an immediate successor of Heliocles (Gardner, 1971: XXXIV). He succeeded Heliocles in the rule of his Indian province between the Hindu Kush and the Jehlum (Tarn, 1951: 273). Lysias and Antialcidas were close contemporaries who may have reigned immediately after one another, if not simultaneously, in different territories but using the same mints. It is quite possible to assert that Lysias ruled immediately after Zoilus I (Bopearachchi, & Rahman, 1995:36). Lysias was also the last king to rule all three kingdoms west of the Jehlum; Taxila, Gandhara, and Paropamisadae. After his death, his realm was divided or broken up into its three component parts (Tarn, 1951: 315). Two coins in the Peshawar Museum collection (pp:44-45) derive from the reign of Lysias. The first has a bust of the king wearing an elephant scalp on the obverse and Herakles on reverse, The second has bust of Herakles on obverse and an elephant on the reverse. The copper square coin has a weight of 6.42 grams and measures 19.16 x 16.93 mm. The round silver coin has a weight of 2.16 grams and a diameter of 17.35 mm.

Fifteen specimens of four types minted in silver and copper in the Peshawar Museum collection derive from the reign of Antialcidas (pp:45-50). Coins of the first type, are square, minted in copper, have a bust of Zeus on the obverse and Pilo and Palms of Dioskuroi on the reverse. Coins of the second type are the same as those of the first but are round in shape. Coins of the third type have a helmeted bust of the king on the obverse and an enthroned Zeus on the reverse. Coins of the fourth type have a bust of the King wearing flat Kausia on the obverse and an enthroned Zeus on the reverse. The nine copper square coins range in weight between 6.78 and 9.54 grams and their sizes range between 18.23 x 22.95 and 19.51 x 18.54 mm. The five round silver coins range in weight between 1.96 and 2.44 grams, while their diameters range between 16.10 and 17.42 mm. The copper round coin has a weight of 4.92 grams and a diameter of 24.11 mm.

1.4.18 Heliocles II (110-100 BC)

There are two kings by the name of Heliocles, and they are only differentiated on the basis of their coins. The coins from the reign Heliocles I are monolingual, bearing only a Greek legend. By contrast, coins from the reign of Heliocles II bear a Greek legend on the obverse and a Kharoshti legend on the reverse. Heliocles I of Bactria, who is represented on the last series of his coins as an old man, cannot be the same person who crossed the Hindu Kush Mountains thirty years later to conquer the territories of Strato I. Heliocles II was able to take over the mints and territories of Strato I when he assumed the kingship. (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 35).

Four coins of silver and copper in the Peshawar Museum collection derive from the reign of Heliocles II (pp:50-51). These coins may be classified into three types. Coins of the first type have a diademed bust of the king on the obverse and an elephant on the reverse. Coins of the second type have the helmeted bust of the king on the obverse and Zeus on the reverse (Jan, 1954: 48). Coins of the third type have the diademed bust of the king on the obverse and Zeus on the reverse. The weight of the two copper coins are 7.00 and 8.42 grams, and they measure 18.68 x 18.59 and 22.00 x 21.00 mm in size. Weight of the round silver coins ranges between 2.36 and 8.46 grams, while their diameters range between 17.40 and 26.01 mm.

1.4.19 Polyxenos (100 BC), Philoxenus (100-95 BC), Diomedes (95-90 BC), Amyntas (95-90 BC) and Epander (95-90 BC)

Five kings are known to have ruled in Gandhara between Antialcidas and Maues, the Scythian. They are Diomedes, Epander, Philoxenus, Peucolaos and Artemidorus (Tarn, 1951: 315). Diomedes was the fourth son of Eucratides and a governor of Demetrius or Peukolaos (Peucolaos) in the lower Kabul Valley (Cunningham, 1868: 218). The reign of Philoxenus, who directly succeeded Antialcidas, initiates the reigns of several short-lived kings. Diomedes and Amyntas were the successors of Philoxenus (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 36). Epander was the third son of Eucratides, who was probably a governor of Alexandria Opiane or the Upper Kabul Valley (Cunningham, 1868: 218).

A single square copper coin in the Peshawar Museum collection derives from the reign of Polyxenos (p:51). It has a helmeted bust of the king on the obverse and an aegis on the reverse. It weighs of 9.12 grams and measures 21.87 x 21.16 mm in size. Seven coins in the Peshawar Museum, minted of copper and silver, both square and round in shape, and classified into three types derive from the reign of Philoxenus (pp:52-54). Coins of the first type have a helmeted bust of the king on the obverse and a horseman on the reverse. Coins of the second type have a diademed bust of the king on the obverse and a horseman on the reverse. Coins of the third type have Demeter on the obverse and a bull on the reverse. The two silver square coins weigh 2.30 and 2.36 grams, they measure 14.55 x 14.79 and 15.77 x 15.31 mm in size. The two silver round coins weigh 8.82 and 9.72 grams, and they measure 26.02 and 26.94 mm in diameter. The three square copper coins range in weight between 7.00 and 8.38 grams, while their sizes range between 20.02 x 18.43 and 21.40 x 18.04 mm.

The Peshawar museum collection has two coins that derive from the reign of Diomedes (p:54). These coins feature a helmeted bust on the obverse and a mounted Dioskuroi on the reverse (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 220). The round silver coin has a weight of 8.40 grams and a diameter of 26.32 mm, while the round copper coin has a weight of 10.06 grams and a diameter of 26.20 mm.

Two coins, of silver and copper, in the Peshawar Museum collection derive from the reign of Amyntas (p:55). These coins feature the head of Herakles on the obverse and Zeus on the reverse. The round silver coin has a weight of 2.36 grams and a diameter of 18.35 mm. The square copper coin has a weight of 8.46 grams and size of 19.95 x 20.75 mm.

A single silver round coin in the Peshawar Museum derives from the reign of Epander (p:55). This coin features the helmeted bust of the king on the obverse and Pallas on the reverse (Jan, 1954:50 Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 220). The coin has a weight of 8.12 grams and a diameter of 26.58 mm.

1.4.20 Archebius (90-80 BC) and Nicias (90-85 BC)

Archebius was the last Indo-Greek king to rule Taxila before the city was occupied by the Scythian Maues (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995:37). Seven coins of six different types in the Peshawar Museum collection derive from the reign of Archebius (pp:56-57). Coins of the first type have a diademed bust of the king on the obverse and Zeus on the reverse (Jan, 1954: 49). Coins of the second type have a helmeted bust of the king on the obverse and Zeus on the reverse. Coins of the third type have a helmeted bust of the king on the obverse and Zeus on the reverse. Coins of the fourth type have bust of the Zeus on the obverse and Palms and Pilois of the Dioskouroi on the reverse. Coins of the fifth type have an elephant on the obverse and an owl on the reverse. Coins of the sixth type have a winged Nike on the obverse and an owl on the reverse. The four silver coins range between 2.38 and 10.28 grams in weight, while their diameters range between 16.86 and 26.86 mm. The two square copper coins range between 9.04 and 9.76 grams in weight and they vary in size from 22.06 x 22.19 to 22.20 x 23.59 mm. The copper round coin has a weight of 9.40 grams and a diameter of 25.60 mm.

Three coins of silver and copper, of three types, in the Peshawar Museum collection derive from the reign of Nicias (p:56). The first has a diademed bust of the king on the obverse and a warrior on the reverse. The second has the helmeted bust of the king on the obverse and Pallas on the reverse (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 220), while the third has the diademed bust of the king on the obverse and a dolphin on the reverse. The two silver coins weigh 2.36 and 9.32 grams and measure 16.86 and 27.69 mm in diameter. The copper square coin has a weight of 7.88 grams and a size of 19.66 x 20.99 mm.

1.4.21 Hermaeus (90-70 BC) and the end of Indo-Greek Power

After the death of Archebius, the Greek possession of Gandhara was divided into two parts, which eventually dissolved. In the principality of Kapisa-Begram, the last Greek ruler was Hermaeus (Bernard, 1999: 103), contemporary of Archebius. After the death of Hermaeus, Greek power in the Paropamisadae and Gandhara came to an end (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 37) at the hands of the Scythians who came via the western route around Bactria and conquered Sistan and Arachosia. Further to the east, between the Chenab and the Sutlej rivers, Greek power survived under the reign of Strato II (Bernard, 1999: 103).

When the Scythian general Maues took Taxila around 85 BC, Polyxenos, Dionysus, Apollonophares, Telephus, Zoilus, Lysias, Nicias and Hippostratus ruled in different areas south of the Hindu Kush (Khan, 1998: 19). These Greek kingdoms in India came to an end with the reign of Strato II, who survived with his son for a long time until the beginning of Christian era in the eastern Punjab. Greeks, under the leadership of Apollodotus II, were subsequently able to briefly regain the territories of the Punjab, which they had lost to the Indo-Scythian Maues. However, the Greeks were finally expelled from this region around 55 BC by another Scythian prince, Azes I, who dethroned Hippostratus, the last Greek king of the western Punjab including Taxila and Pushkalavati (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 45).

The coin collection of the Peshawar Museum has 17 coins from the reign of Hermaeus (pp:59-65), a joint issue from Hermaeus and Calliope (90-70 BC) (p: 59), a joint issue of Strato I with Strato II (p:65), 18 from the reign of Apollodotus II (80-65 BC) (pp:65-71), four from the reign of Hippostratus (65-55 BC) (pp:71-72), and four from the reign of Strato II (25 BC-10 AD) (pp:73-74). Coins from the reign of Hermaeus are classified into four types. Coins of the first type have a mounted king on the obverse and an enthroned Zeus on the reverse (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 220). Coins of the second type have a diademed bust of the king on the obverse and an enthroned Zeus on the reverse. Coins of the third type have busts of two kings on the obverse and a winged Nike on the reverse. Coins of the fourth type have a bust of the king on the obverse and Herakles on the reverse. The joint issue of Hermaeus and Calliope weighs 2.24 grams and has a diameter of 16.50 mm. The weight of the three silver round coins from the reign of Hermaeus range between 2.02 and 9.40 grams, and their diameters range between 16.42 and 26.67 mm. The weight of the 14 copper round coins from the reign of Hermaeus range between 1.40 and 9.38 grams and their diameters range between 15.25 and 26.72 mm. The joint issue of Strato I and Strato II weighs of 2.38 grams and measures of 15.45 mm in diameter.

Coins from the reign of Apollodotus II (pp:65-71) may be classified into three types. Coins of the first type have a diademed bust of the king on the obverse and Pallas on the reverse (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 220). Coins of the second type have a bull on the obverse and a tripod on reverse, while coins of the third type have Apollo on the obverse and a tripod on the reverse. The six round silver coins range between 1.66 and 2.38 grams in weight and their diameters range between 15.60 and 18.12 mm. The weight of the three round copper coins range between 2.16 and 16.48 grams and their diameters range between 17.80 and 28.46 mm. The weight of the nine square copper coins range between 1.48 and 9.90 grams and their sizes range between 13.39 x 13.72 and 24.92 x 23.84 mm.

Three types of coins from the reign of Hippostratus (pp:71-72), are encompassed by the Peshawar Museum collection. Coins of the first type have a diademed bust of the king on the obverse and the city goddess on the reverse. Coins of the second type have a diademed bust of the king on the obverse and a mounted horseman on the reverse. Coins of the third type have Apollo on the obverse and a tripod on the reverse. The three round silver coins range in weight between 2.52 and 10.30 grams and their diameters range between 17.96 and 29.74 mm. The square copper coin has a weight of 9.14 grams and a size of 21.42 x 24.39 mm. The diademed bust of the aged king is on the obverse and Pallas is on the reverse of four coins in the Peshawar Museum collection that derive from the reign of Strato II (pp:71-72). The weight of these silver coins ranges between 2.30 and 2.40 grams and their diameters range between 14.12 and 16.38 mm.

INDO-SCYTHIAN AND INDO-PARTHIAN COINS IN THE PESHAWAR MUSEUM

IHSAN ALI, ASAD RAZA AND M. SHAHID KHAN

The first section of this volume deals with the coins of Greek invaders of northwest India. The next foreign invaders to make their appearance in India after the destruction of the Greek kingdoms were two dynasties, the Scythians and Parthians, often mentioned in association with each other, as Scytho-Parthians (Ali et al, 2004: 8). They became masters of the same territories ruled by later Indo-Greek sovereigns and were partly contemporary with them (Rahim, 1998:50).

2.1 The Scythians

The nomads who occupied the northern regions of Asia and Europe are generally termed Saka or Scythians. The Chinese tribe Yue-Chi forced the Scythians from their original home. At first, they moved southwest and occupied Bactria, Chi-pin (Kapisa), Herat and Sistan (Sakastan); eventually, they entered the lower Indus (Indo-Scythia) (Puri, 1999: 191). The Scythians were based initially in Sistan in Southeast Iran and Afghanistan (Ali, 2003: 50). Their political power in Punjab and Sindh can be dated to the first century BC.

According to Chinese accounts, the Sakas-Se or Sok-a nomads lived to the west of the Chinese Empire and were driven out of their land by another nomadic people, the Yue-chi, and migrated into Ki-Pin (Kashmir) around the end of second century BC. From there, they eventually spread over Sistan, Sindh and northwestern Punjab. The Scythians overthrew the Greek rulers in these parts and established a new kingdom to the east and west of the river Indus known as Indo-Scythia (Whitehead, 1914: 91).

The Scythian invaders of the Indian subcontinent did not come through the Kabul Valley. Rather, they reached India by the Bolan Pass from Drangiana (modern Sistan) and Arachosia (Kandahar) over the Brahui Mountains into the lower Indus (Sindh) (Puri, 1999: 192). Before the invasion of the Kabul Valley by the Yue-Chi, the Scythians occupied the areas north of the Hindu Kush Mountains. The Greek kingdom in the Indus Valley (Taxila) ruled by Apollodotus II was taken over by Scythian king Maues around 85 BC (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 44-45). Later, the Greeks under the leadership of Apollodotus II were able to regain the lost territories of the Punjab. However, they were expelled from this region around 55 BC by another Scythian prince, Azes I, who dethroned Hippostratus, the last Greek king to reign in the Western Punjab, Taxila and Pushkalavati (Bopearachchi, 1993: 56).

The Sakas in India, especially the Scythians under Maues and the House of Azes in the Indus Valley, occupied the provinces ruled by the Indo-Greeks since the time of Menander. The Scythians continued the Greek system of administration and culture, and they retained the monetary system of their immediate predecessors as well. The Scythians maintained the monetary system by using a wide range of images on the reverse side of coins and bilingual characters, Greek on the obverse and Kharoshthi on the reverse (Puri, 1999: 203). The major Indo-Scythian dynasty ruled an empire based on the Punjab and Indus Valley from 50 BC to 30 AD (Ibid: 194). The Scythians, like the Parthians, were not destroyers but were ready to take advantage and utilize the superior civil organization of the Greeks by retaining the same provincial administration and coinage (Tarn, 1951: 323).

2.2 The Parthians

The Seleucid kingdom was affected by a number of socio-economic crises after the death of Antiochus II in 246 BC (Bernard, 1999: 100). The Seleucid governors of Bactria and Parthia, Diodotus and Andragoras, broke away. This resulted in the emergence of a Parthian Kingdom (Koshelenko & Pilipko, 1999: 131). Under Mithradates and his descendants, the Parthians extended their empire into Bactria and pushed back the invading Scythians (Gardner, 1971: XLIII).

Gondophares was the first Parthian king. Gondophares reunified the divided Empire of the Scythian king Azes II, and established the Pahlva or Indo-Parthian kingdom (Puri, 1999: 196). Gondophares put an end to Scythian rule and established his kingdom over Gandhara and the neighboring regions (Bopearachchi and Rahman, 1995: 48). Various forms of the name Gondophares appeared on his coins. These were merely an attempt to translate into Greek the Old Persian title "Vindafarnah" (the winner of glory). The political history of the Indo-Parthian dynasty of Gondophares depends almost entirely upon numismatic evidence and the way in which the coin series are arranged (Puri, 1999: 196-197). The full picture of Indo-Parthian political history must await the detailed numismatic study of each of these Indo-Parthian coin sequences and their relationship with those of the rulers who preceded and followed them (Ibid: 198).

2.3 Scytho-Parthian coins in Peshawar Museum

The coins of the Scytho-Parthian kings throw considerable light on the history of the dynasties that succeeded the Indo-Greeks in Gandhara (Bopearachchi, 1993: 57). Scythian and Parthian kings issued coins in silver, copper and billon based on the Greek pattern but they added some Indian deities to the list (Rahim, 1998: 50). The pedigree of the Scythian and Parthian rulers in this area is much easier to ascertain from their coinage than is the case for their Indo-Greek predecessors. Coinage of the first Scythian king, Maues, is marked by great similarities to that of Apollodotus II the Indo-Greek, except for its weight standard, legends and imaginativeness. This array of similarities and differences suggests that the Scythians may have utilized the services of the mint masters and occupied some of their mints as well, but their coinage was not entirely shackled to Greek conventions. The successors of Maues, Azes and Azilises, continued the same standard of coinage as developed by Maues.

This catalogue contains 268 coins (175 silver and 93 copper) of ten Scytho-Parthian kings held in the Peshawar Museum collection. These Scytho-Parthian coins in the Peshawar Museum weigh between 1.48 to 14.70 grams and range in size from 11.04 to 30.14 mm. Of these 268 Scytho-Parthian coins, 247 are round and 21 are square. They derive from the reigns of Maues, Azes II, joint issues of Azes and Azilises, Azilises, joint issues of Vonones with Spalahores, a joint issue of Spalyris with Spalagadames, Spalarises, Gondophares, Abdagases. All of the Scytho-Parthian coins in this catalogue share many characteristics in common. Though there are dynastic differences, their coinage bears the same stylistic features as if the same hand had engraved all the dies, bearing the same group of monograms, though struck by different rulers. The king on horseback with Kharoshthi letters is a common feature of Scytho-Parthian coinage and these coins follow a common Indian weight standard. Another common feature, mostly on those issued by single sovereigns, is the mounted king having also a Kharoshthi letter on the obverse of their coins. This may lead us to conclude that all these coins were in circulation in the same area and period. The Parthian rulers who succeeded the Scythians in the Indus provinces copied and retained these new conventions in other territories.

2.3.1 Maues (circa 85 BC)

Maues, or Maukes in Greek and Moa or Moga in Kharoshti (Tarn, 1951: 321), was the earliest Saka (Scythian) ruler in the Indus region (Puri, 1999: 193). He overthrew the rule of the Indo-Greek king Apollodotus II and took control of Taxila. This event took place around 85 BC, a few years before the invasion of the Kabul Valley by the Yue-chi, who then occupied the territories north of the Hindu Kush Mountains (Bopearachchi, 1993: 56). Maues' conquest of Taxila and Gandhara cut the Greeks of Eastern Punjab off from those of Paropamisadae (Tarn, 1951: 323).

King Moga, mentioned in the Patika Copper Plate inscription discovered at Taxila in 1862, was actually Maues. The inscription is dated to the 5th day of the month of Panemus of the 78th year (of an unknown era) of the great King Moga (Maues) (Bopearachchi, 1993: 56). Many scholars think that this era started around 155 BC. Some scholars have named the era as the "old Saka era" coinciding with the accession of King Menander in the Indo-Greek territories. Such a chronology suggests that the Indo-Scythian Empire was established in the Indus around 88 BC (Puri, 1999:193). Scythian rule over Taxila was of short duration and was overthrown by Apollodotus II, who had earlier lost it to Maues. Azes, the successor of Maues, again captured Taxila around 55 BC (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 45).

The coinage stemming from the reign of Maues followed many of the coin types of his Greek predecessors, but he had them struck in his own name, "Maues" in Greek and "Moa" in Prakrit (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 44). The numismatic data suggest an outline of the history of Maues' successors. Vonones was probably a younger contemporary of Maues, ruling in the eastern border country of Iran and Arachosia in association with his brother Spalahora (Spalahores) and his nephew Spalagadama (Spalagadames), who later succeeded him. Then began the reign of Spalarisa (Spalarises), first as the brother of the king then as a sole ruler, and lastly in tandem with someone called Azes. The Scythian kingdom during this period may have extended from Arachosia to the Paropamisadae (Kabul) (Puri, 1999: 194).

Whitehead (1914:91) notes that Alexander Cunningham thought there were three distinct dynasties of Saka or Indo-Scythian rulers whose names have been preserved on their coins. The first dynasty proceeded from Vonones and his lieutenant Spalahores and Spalagadames, who held the area to the west of Indus. The second dynasty, proceeding from Maues or Moa and Azes, held the Punjab. The third dynasty encompassed Sindh and western Central India, to which the great Satrap Nahapana belonged.

A single silver and fourteen copper coins, classified into nine different types, in the Peshawar Museum collection come from the reign of Maues (pp:87-91). Coins of the first type have Zeus standing to the left on the obverse and Nike on the reverse, are minted in silver, and are round in shape. Coins of the second type, encompassing two copper minted and square-shaped specimens, have Apollo on the obverse and a tripod on the reverse. Coins of the third type are minted in copper, square-shaped, and have a horse on the obverse and a bow with case on the reverse. Coins of the fourth type are of copper, square-shaped, and have an elephant on the obverse and the king seated cross-legged on a raised cushion on the reverse. (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 220). Coins of the fifth type are of copper, square-shaped, and have the lunar goddess on the obverse and Nike on the reverse. Coins of the sixth type are of copper, square-shaped, and have Zeus on the obverse and the city goddess on the reverse. Coins of the seventh type are of copper, square-shaped, and feature Poseidon with a trident on the obverse and a female figure standing between trees on the reverse. Coins of the eighth type are of copper, are round-shaped, and have Herakles on the obverse and lioness or leopard on the reverse. Coins of the ninth type are of copper, are round-shaped, and have an elephant head on the obverse and Caduceus on the reverse. The silver round coin weighs 8.86 grams and measures 25.91 mm in diameter. The nine square copper coins range in weight from 1.54 to 11.18 grams and their size ranges from 13.91 x 13.41 to 24.67 x 23.98 mm. The five round copper coins range in weight between 6.74 and 9.10 grams, and their diameters range between 21.98 and 29.30 mm.

The Peshawar Museum coin collection has two joint issues from the reigns of Vonones and Spalahores. Both coins are of copper and square in shape (p:169). Herakles is featured on the obverse and Pallas on the reverse. These coins weigh 7.20 and 7.86 grams, and measure 18.90 x 20.52 and 19.72 x 21.98 mm. The only coin that represents a joint issue from the reigns of Spalyris and Spalagadames is square-shaped and minted in copper (p:169). This coin features a king on horseback on the obverse and Herakles on the reverse. This coin has a weight of 7.82 grams and measures 22.42 x 21.49 mm. Three coins stemming from the reign of Spalarises are encompassed by the Peshawar Museum collection (p:170). These copper, square-shaped coins feature a king on the obverse and an enthroned Zeus on the reverse. These coins range in weight from 6.86 to 9.94 grams and range in size from 22.16 x 20.98 to 24.10 x 24.78 mm.

2.3.2 Azes (circa 57 BC)

Azes, the successor of Maues, ruled over the same territories and did not extend greatly the dominions of Maues, the extraordinary number of his coins testifies to his wealth and power (Gardner, 1971: Xli). Numismatists have determined the existence of two kings called Azes (Puri, 1999: 194). Marshall suggested a distinction between the coins of Azes I and Azes II in 1951 on the basis of numismatic evidence from the Taxila excavation. This division was later developed by G.K Jen King in his thesis. According to this division, silver coins with a mounted king holding a transverse spear on the obverse are considered issues from the reign of Azes I, while those with a mounted king holding a whip are attributed to the reign of Azes II (Bopearachchi, 1993: 57).

It is now firmly established that the era beginning in 57 BC, known as the Vikrama era, owed its origin to the first Indo-Scythian king, Azes I. Relying on the dates of these two eras, the "old Saka era" and the "Vikrama" era, we can establish with reasonable certainty a chronological sequence for the Greek and Scythian contemporaries of Maues and Azes I (Bopearachchi, 1993: 57).

The Peshawar Museum collection has 153 coins attributable to Azes; most likely derive from the reign of Azes II (pp:92-142). These coins are classified into 17 types. All feature the name 'Azes' written in Greek on the obverse and the name 'Ayasa' in Kharoshthi on the reverse. Coins of type one have a king on horseback with a whip on the obverse and Zeus with Nike on the reverse. There are 80 round silver coins of this type. Coins of type two have the same features as type one, but are minted in copper. There are 16 of those coins. Coins of type three have a mounted king with a whip on the obverse and Pallas crowning herself on the reverse. There are three round silver coins of this type. Coins of type four have a mounted king with a whip on the obverse and Pallas on the reverse. There are seven round silver coins of this type. Coins of type five have the same features as those of type four but are minted in copper. There are six coins of this type in the collection. Coins of type six have a mounted king with a whip on the obverse and a lion on the reverse. A single representative of this type is a round copper coin. Coins of type seven have a mounted king with a whip on the obverse and Demeter on the reverse. A single coin of this type is round in shape and minted in copper. Coins of type eight have a mounted king on the obverse and bull on the reverse. Two copper coins were recovered of this type. One is round and the other is square. Coins of type nine have a king seated cross-legged on the obverse and Hermes on the reverse. There are three round copper coins of this type. Coins of type ten have a king on a Bactrian camel on the obverse and Yak on the reverse. The sole representative of this type in the Peshawar Museum coin collection is a single square copper coin. Coins of type eleven feature Poseidon on the obverse and a female figure on the reverse. The two specimens of this type are square copper coins. Coins of type twelve feature Demeter on the obverse and a lion on the reverse. The sole representative of this type is a square copper coin. Coins of type thirteen feature a lion on the obverse and Demeter on the reverse. The two coins assigned to this type are round and minted in copper. Coins of type fourteen have a seated Demeter on the obverse and Hermes on the reverse. Two round copper coins are of this type. Coins of type fifteen have a humped bull on the obverse and a lion on the reverse. This type is represented by 25 round copper coins. Coins of type sixteen feature an elephant on the obverse and a bull on the reverse. The single coin of this type is round and minted in copper. The weights of the 95 silver round coins range between 1.48 and 12.74 grams, while their diameters range between 14.02 and 25.82 mm. The weights of the 52 copper round coins range between 1.60 and 14.70 grams, while their diameters range between 11.60 and 30.14 mm. The weights of the six copper square coins range between 3.44 and 13.34 grams, while their sizes range between 18.21 x 18.87 and 27.26 x 26.94 mm.

2.3.3 Azilises and Azes II

Azilises succeeded Azes I as king of kings in the Indus provinces (Puri, 1999: 195). Azilises, before his accession to independent power, was the subordinate vice-regal colleague of Azes I. Similarly, Azes II was served as subordinate vice-regal of Azilises (Whitehead, 1914: 93) a prior to his accession. We know that Azes I associated Azilises with himself as co-ruler because there are coins struck in both names (Tarn, 1951: 348). However, the supposed joint coinage is rare. Hence, such coins may simply represent the continued use of old dies after Azilises accession, for Azilises struck coins in the three mints used by Azes I (Puri, 1999: 195).

Azes II succeeded Azilises as king of kings in the Indus kingdom and added Jalalabad and Gardez to his empire (Ibid, 196). Azes II used the Zeus Nickphorous reverse type for his silver issues from Taxila and the Pallas types for his mint in Gandhara. The evidence of overstrike and stratified finds at Taxila shows that Azilises succeeded Azes I, and was followed by Azes II. Azilises continued to use the Azes I obverse type, showing the king with a couched lance, but introduced the new obverse type of the king holding a whip--a type continued by his successor, Azes II.

The Peshawar Museum coin collection has 76 round silver joint issues of Azes and Azilises (pp:143-168). All are of same type, having a mounted king with a whip and Azilises written in Greek on the obverse and Zeus with Nike or Azes (Ayasa) written in Kharoshti on the reverse. The weights of these coins range between 1.98 and 2.48 grams, while their diameters range between 13.88 and 16.06 mm. Two coins from the reign of Azilises are assigned to different types (p:168).

Type one has a mounted king on the obverse and an armed dioskuroi on the reverse. The specimen is round in shape and minted in silver. It has a weight of 2.08 grams and a diameter of 16.40 mm. Type two has a king on horseback on the obverse and a humped bull on the reverse. This square copper coin has a weight of 10.86 grams and measure 25.93 x 21.42 mm.

2.4 Gondophares (20-45 AD)

The Parthian king Gondophares, founder of the Indo-Parthian dynasty, may have begun his rule by putting an end to Scythian rule and establishing his own kingdom in Gandhara and neighbouring regions (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 48). At its height, the empire of Gondophares covered more territory than the Indo-Scythian House of Azes, extending from Aria and Sistan in the west, to Mathura in the east, and from Kabul and Begram in the north, to Kandahar and the mouth of Indus in the south (Puri, 1999: 199).

Whitehead (1914: 94) informs us that Cunningham presents Gondophares as the founder of a separate dynasty supplanting that of Maues, Azes, and Azilises. Abdagases was his nephew, and other members of the line were Orthagnes, Pakores, and Sanabares. The names of these kings are Parthian, and the busts on their coins closely resemble those of the contemporaneous rulers of Parthia. A planetary symbol is generally found on the coins of Gondophares and Abdagases, which was termed by Cunningham as "the Gondopharian symbol."

The Peshawar museum collection contains one silver and twelve copper coins from the reign of the great Parthian king Gondophares. These coins may be classified into six different types (pp:171-175). Coins of type one have the head of the king on the obverse and Pallas on the reverse. This type is represented by a single round copper coin. Coins of the second type are round, minted in copper, and have a king on horseback on the obverse and Zeus on the reverse. There are three coins of this type. Coins of the type three have the king on horseback on the obverse and Pallas on the reverse. Coins of this type are represented by a single round copper coin. Coins of type four have a bust of the king on the obverse and the king seated on a throne on the reverse. A single round silver coin weighing 3.20 grams with a diameter of 19.79 mm is the sole representative of this type. Coins of type five have the bust of the king on the obverse and a winged Nike on the reverse. This type is represented by seven round copper coins. The weights of the twelve copper round coins range between 2.26 and 9.40 grams, while their diameters range between 11.04 and 24.66 mm.

2.4.1 Abdagases

The most important Parthian king, Gondophares, is associated with Abdagases, who calls himself the nephew of Gondophares on his coins (Gardner, 1971:XIII). It is likely that Abdagases was a satrap who succeeded Gondophares in some of his domains (Bopearachchi, 1993: 60).

Only three copper round coins in the Peshawar Museum coin collection of two different types, derive from the reign of Abdagases (p:175-176). Coins of type one feature the bust of a king on the obverse and a winged Nike on the reverse. Coins of type two have a mounted king on the obverse and Zeus on the reverse. This type bears the title of Abdagases as the nephew of King Gondophares and there are two specimens. These coins weigh 8.58 and 9.38 grams, while their diameter measures 22.84 and 23.92 mm.

Both Indo-Scythian and Indo-Parthian kingdoms collapsed as a result of a major invasion by the Kushans under Kujula Kadphises, who put an end to the Parthian rule in Gandhara and Paropamisadae (Bopearachchi & Rahman, 1995: 49).
